

REAL ESTATE MAN SHOOTS HIMSELF

Schreyer's Second Attempt to Die in Suicidal Mania
Is Successful.

John F. Schreyer, twenty-nine years old, a real estate broker, living at No. 124 West One Hundred and Forty-first street, died at J. Hood Wright Hospital today from a self-inflicted bullet wound in his right temple.

According to Leslie E. Trimm of No. 60 West One Hundred and Forty-second street, a friend, Schreyer previously tried to kill himself with gas in his bedroom last night.

Trimm went to Policeman Biddell, who was on post at Broadway and One Hundred and Forty-first street, about midnight, and told him there was an injured man in the Schreyer apartment on the ground floor.

Biddell found the real estate broker on the floor with a hole in his temple and a revolver by his side and Mrs. Schreyer weeping over him. A doctor in the neighborhood was called and said it was a hospital case. Schreyer was then taken to the hospital by Dr. Olet.

Trimm told the police he had been invited to the Schreyer apartment to spend the evening. His host, he said, had been drinking of late and developed melancholia and suicidal mania. He and Mrs. Schreyer talked to him and tried to cheer him up. Schreyer went into his bedroom about 11 o'clock, and in a short time they smelled gas and found him on the floor with the gas turned on. He was revived and seemed in better spirits. They reasoned with him some more and thought they had dissuaded him from further attempts on his life when he excused himself and stepped into another room. In a few minutes there was a revolver shot and they found him unconscious on the floor.

Schreyer's father is said to own the apartment house in which the son lives.
